

“What language would you like to speak today?”

At Studio Legale Sutti, we love the English language, which is spoken by more or less 100% of our members, some of whom are mother tongue. Moreover, we fully recognise English to be “the” language of the Internet, so that our Web site is entirely in English, a choice which is hardly common for a continental firm. Thus, we are happy to communicate with you in this language... provided that you are, say, Australian or British, American or Irish.

In fact, we strongly oppose Anglo-saxon monoglottism in business, especially legal business. Many Italian or Bulgarian legal concepts, which take a couple of pages’ opinion to be clarified in English, have a very good one-word translation for all German (or Japanese) lawyers and in-house counsel, as is the case the other way around; and we believe that your time is too valuable to go through the painful and inefficient process of using Shakespeare’s idiom, instead of your native language, as a kind of “international communication code”.

This is why at Studio Legale Sutti we strive to cultivate our lawyers’ linguistic skills, and are proud to have, among our personnel, French, German, Spanish, Japanese, Finnish, Portuguese mother-tongue colleagues - in addition of course to our native Italian, Bulgarian, Serbo-Croat and Romanian. And this is why we exhort you, when communicating with us, to make use of your native language, or - when this is not possible - of the language we have in common which is actually the most comfortable for you.
